Table 5 gives data on six OIELs whose destination coverage was reduced during the period.

The destination coverage of OIELs is amended for a variety of reasons, but mainly in light of advice received from other departments. Sometimes, amendments follow the imposition of an arms embargo, but they may also reflect general concerns about the country concerned or a relevant change in circumstances there. A decision to remove a particular country from the destination coverage of an OIEL does not prevent the company from applying for a standard individual export licence covering the export of some or all of the goods covered by the OIEL to a destination that has been excluded from the coverage of that OIEL. However, the factors that led to the decision to exclude the country would obviously be taken into account in the decision on any such application. In addition, a decision to exclude a particular country from the coverage of an OIEL does not mean that country is permanently excluded. Where the concerns that led to the original decision are no longer relevant, it might be decided to reinstate the country concerned.

It does not cover applications from which specific goods or destinations were removed before an OIEL was issued, or applications withdrawn before a decision was reached, or those for which it was determined that no licence was required or that the goods could be exported to the destination concerned under an Open General Export Licence.

Special Categories of OIELs

There are two special categories of OIELs:

Media OIELs

Media OIELs authorise the export of protective clothing and equipment, mainly for the protection of aid agency workers and journalists, for example when working in areas of conflict. They are valid for two years, and cover the export to all destinations of items such as military helmets, body armour, bullet-proof or bullet-resistant clothing, flak suits and specially designed components for any of these goods. Goods exported under a Media OIEL must be returned to the UK when they are no longer required for personal protection.

During the period, seven Media OIELs were issued. No Media OIELs were revoked and no applications for such licences were refused.

Continental Shelf OIELs

Continental Shelf OIELs authorise the export of controlled goods to the UK sector of the Continental Shelf for the use only on, or in connection with, offshore installations and associated vessels.

During the period, six Continental Shelf OIELs were issued. No Continental Shelf OIELs were revoked and no applications for such licences were refused.

Open General Licences

Open General Export Licences (OGELs) allow the export of specified controlled goods by any company, removing the need for exporters to apply for an individual licence, provided the shipment and destinations are eligible and the conditions are met. Exporters must register with the Export Control Organisation before they make use of most OGELs. There is also a small number of Open

General Transshipment Licences (OGTLs), for which registration is not required. All Open General Licences (OGLs) remain in force until they are revoked.

A list of all relevant OGLs in force during the period is provided at Table 7: copies of current OGLs may be obtained from the DTI's Export Control Organisation, or from the DTI's website (<http://www.dti.gov.uk/export.control>).

Performance in processing licence applications

The Export Control Organisation sets out the Government's commitments to exporters in a Service and Performance Code. Where it is not necessary for an application for a SIEL to be circulated to other government departments according to their policy requirements as determined by them, the aim is to provide a substantive response within 10 working days of receipt of the application. Where circulation is necessary, as is the case with the majority of applications, the aim is to provide such a response within 20 working days. These targets apply as soon as full documentation in support of the application has been provided by the applicant.

The targets do not apply to applications for OIELs because of the very wide variation in the goods and destination coverage of such licences, nor do they apply to licences concerning Iran or Iraq or to applications for licences to export goods which are subject to control solely because of United Nations Sanctions.

During the period, approximately 79% of all uncirculated cases for individual licences to export strategic goods were processed within 10 working days and in the same period, 52% of all such applications that were circulated to other government departments were processed within 20 working days.

The Export Control Organisation also responds to requests from exporters for advice on whether or not a licence is required to export particular goods of which the exporter has provided full technical details.

During the period, 2356 such requests were dealt with: of those that were circulated to other government departments 85% were given advice within 20 working days; of those that did not require circulation 90% were given advice within 10 working days.
